

AutCom Statement on the Portrayal of Autistics

Individuals and organizations who engage in any activities that portray or plan for autistics should, first and foremost, recognize and respect them as people who have gifts, capabilities, and contributions to make. Every effort should be made to avoid emphasizing differences and deficits to the detriment of acknowledging gifts and common humanity.

Revised 1-29-2020